Terrorist still alive? AFP wants proof of life

By TJ Nap and Julia Alpala

SHOW proof of life. Like defending Terrorists, military officials yesterday challenged a Malaysian security official to produce evidence that Zuhair bin Abdul Halim aka Marwan, the Malaysian extremist with a $5-million bounty on his head, was still alive.

"The Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) maintains its position that Marwan was killed in a recent Philippine air strike in Sulu country to ensure that he survived the operation and is alive," said AFP public affairs chief Col. Amado Merced Berge.

Any claim to the contrary, he said, must come with "convincing proof of life."

Berge was reacting to the statement issued to the Norman Franco Press by April Elmi Mylin Pichay deputy head of the Malaysian police brass concerning an oral that said Marwan is still alive.

Western Mindanao Command chief Maj. Gen. Noel Calalang also said his staff remained that Marwan and two other Jemaah Islamiyah operatives were still alive.

THE JAPANESE are back and a euphoric President Aquino says he expects the wave of Japanese investments currently pouring into the country to continue for some time.

After Japan's power, infrastructure and supply chain were hit hard by the devastating earthquake, tsunami and nuclear accident exactly a year ago this month, Japan's businessmen are looking to expand outside their country and are taking a very strong interest in the Philippines, Mr. Aquino said.

The President's bullish remarks are supported by the country's businessmen who believe that Japan's renewed interest in the Philippines will pave the way for other foreign investors to follow.

Japan has 50 nuclear reactors and of the 50, only three are still operating. It is no joke to lose three 50 nuclear plants and that is a major factor in [businessmen] moving some of their operations out of Japan and bringing them here. I believe Japan will continue to be one of our biggest investors," Mr. Aquino said in an interview.

The President is anchoring this ray outlook on Japanese investments on last year's data on foreign direct investments (FDI) which surged to P256.1 billion, 32.6 percent higher than the P266.3 billion registered in 2010. It was also the highest since the P241.1 billion reached Defense: Is offense impeachable?

Need a job?

By G. Bergman

THE IMPACHMENT court should rule on whether or not Chief Justice Renato Corona's failure to declare the acquisition cost of his properties in his statement of assets, liabilities and net worth (SALN) constitutes an impeachable offense, defense lawyers said yesterday.

If this were an offense, then all the government officials who followed the previous practice of citing the fair market value, not acquisition cost, as the basis for declaring the worth of properties in their SALNs should also be held liable, defense lawyer and spokesperson Timpal Infante Jr. argued.

"Before you render a ruling on the Chief Justice, is it something that could be reviewed? Is it something that could be reviewed? That will lead us to the final question: Is that an impeachable offense? Assuming it's a non-impeachable, it is sufficient to remove him from office," Infante told reporters after a forum.

The question should be resolved by the constitutional body before they issue a ruling, he said.

Corona filed in the fair market value and not declaring in his properties, but left the acquisition cost of his properties available in his 2010 SALN, which was also observed in his SALNs during his term.

Infante spokespersons said Corona's acquisition cost of his properties was not an impeachable offense when government officials, the president, the vice president, and the members of the Sangguni Pangalabang, were not required to declare it.

"If the other government officials, including impeachable officers, failed to fill out everything including the acquisition cost and value, the question that arises is, is that an impeachable offense? We're not saying that to show if it's relevant to the matter of the case, or if it's an impeachable offense," he said the forum at Ateneo de Manila.

He also argued that there was a technical violation in allowing an affidavit to contain figures that he had SALN, and that in Corona's case, if there were errors, he could correct them.

All officials liable

He said it was government to say if the defense would present the SALNs of other government officials to show that this was the previous practice.

Infante said it was logical to say that if the impeachment court finds this to be an impeachable offense, then all the officials who submitted in this practice should also be held liable.

"The result will be a natural consequence. If we're wrong, let's not be surprised as to the results that he did not fill up the acquisition cost, which should lead the government to examine all filings of public officers, from top to bottom, if there were diligent and genuine compliance with the SALN," he said.

The prosecution started on Friday that Corona underlined his net worth in his 2010 SALN, pointing out that he should have declared a net worth of P80 million based on the acquisition cost of his assets and bank deposits, based on P252 million.

Facts to defend

Defense lawyers said they would present evidence that Corona's SALN, the source of questioning among senators in late Thursday said. They said this would contradict Corona's testimony.

"We're not yet there," Infante said. "We will show that the acquisition cost of his properties is not an impeachable offense. We will show that the acquisition cost of his properties is not an impeachable offense. We will show that the acquisition cost of his properties is not an impeachable offense."

Inf. Renato Almazan, a member of the prosecution panel, stated the Chief Justice's failure to declare the real acquisition cost of his SALN was "bad" in his defense.

Mendoza suffers heart attack

PHILIPPINE Transportation Secretary Leonardo Mendoza was rushed to St. Luke's Medical Center at Rockwell Global City yesterday after suffering a heart attack.

Senator Lizardo Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board Chair Romualdo Lantion said Mendoza was enroute to his birthday celebration at a resort in San Juan, Benguet, when the incident happened at around 4 p.m. He said he arrived at the hospital after he completed his flight duty that Sunday lying on the ground, Lantion said via telephone interview.

"He doesn't say he is in stable condition but he needs to be observed for 24 hours." Prior to his appointment as former President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo's "Liaison Privé," Mendoza served as transportation secretary. He signed the amended national 1200-million National Road and Bridge Construction Program (NBRCP) in 2009.

Lantion said Mendoza's health condition was not serious. He said Mendoza was not in any danger and was being treated by the hospital staff. He said Mendoza was not in any danger and was being treated by the hospital staff.

Defense says it will call Cristina Corona in May

By Tita G. Santos

DONT expect the defense team in the impeachment trial of Chief Justice Renato Corona to call its prosecution the next week with "evidence" before the constitutional judge takes a break for Holy Week. Assistant Corona Corona may only "have with him" what he has in the trial court.

The Corona defense team has promised to present a host of witnesses in October, including 24 other impeachment judges, but does not "highlight" witnesses compared to Corona to cross the Chief Justice himself.

Corona's deposition on March 21 and on some sessions on May 7.

Defense counsel and spokesperson Trinidad Velasco III said the panel would not present Corona in a manner he has looked at in May.

Presenting Corona in a manner is not as much a matter of deliberation, as a matter of "need," according to Velasco. That opposition would largely depend on the flow of witnesses and their testimonies, he added.

No 'star witness'

"We're laying out evidence, and in laying the evidence, there is a path you will see. You draw a direction. And where the direction evolves that point where we need to present facts, Corona, then we will do it. So we will say when she will testify," he said.

Earlier in a press briefing at Justice's residence in Quezon City, Velasco said the defense panel had no "star witnesses" in present.

His colleague, lawyer Rodolfo Quijano, said the defense would give every case, including the judges, prosecution and defense lawyers, a "neutral mind" before the final stretch of the impeachment trial in May and June.

No delay

This, however, did not mean that the defense was delaying the prosecution of its evidence, another defense spokesperson, Karen Limon, said.

In compliance with impeachment rules, the defense withdrew the charges of their witnesses for the reading week, the second week of their presentation.

The defense lawyers, however, said that Corona himself was the last person to answer the issues of his impeachment in Juan Galante Enterprises Inc. (JGEI), the corporation owned by his wife's family that has gained prominence in the trial.

Reacting to a story by implications that said Corona himself had assigned the sale of JGEI's property to friends, Velasco said, "You're meant to reach out to him. If he's going to take the witness stand, it will appear that we will be explaining this about his family history."

"It's correct in right, his intent is that he should be the one to explain, which I think is the better way of doing it. Besides, we have no personal knowledge of it."

Property negotiation

The story said Corona and his wife met with then Manila Mayor Lito Abaya to negotiate the sale of the 1,022-square-unit lot on Legarda Street, "money power" of the then-Abaya family corporation, agreeing on the price P14.7 million. The city government later found a check in Corona "in trust" for JGEI.

As for one claimants of assets, liabilities and net worth, Corona listed "cash advances" from JGEI representing payment for his properties.

The defense panel, however, said it was not yet clear if Corona himself would testify at his own trial.

"It's hard to say whether this would happen the whole thing. We have yet to see if this is needed. There are those probing for his testimony since he's the accused. If we don't see him, on the stand on the last day, we still would have called in the other witnesses that we presented," Limon said.

OFW in Paris held for baby's death

By Tita G. Santos

AN OREGONAS Filipino mother (OPF) in France landed in jail after her 14-month-old went down, the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said.

The incident happened on March 12 when the OPF, whose identity was withheld, allegedly left the baby in a tub, the foreign office said.

It said their police arrested the Philippine Embassy about the Filipino woman's arrest.

"The embassy immediately started efforts to ensure that our OFW was provided with a lawyer so that she would be duly represented," the DFA said.

It added that the OFW was transferred to the French foreign prison in the custody of Parisian Police.

"She was also given a court-appointed lawyer. But the embassy's request for a jail visit has not yet been granted," the DFA said, adding that the embassy kept in line the Philippines had been informed of the incident.

Maaasahan, lalo na sa oras ng pangangailangan.

Before typhoon Raman struck the town of Nauangan in Southern Leyte last year, volunteers from 43 barangays were able to receive timely relief materials from the municipal disaster risk reduction and management office. This gave them time to alert and prepare their respective communities.

Through the Smart network, which operates nationwide throughout the island, their headquarters were able to gather timely reports from the ground, allowing them to manage their response efforts and resources.

Nauangan is one of the 22 pilot towns under the "Strengthening Disaster Preparedness through SMS technology" program of the Philippine Bureau for Social Progress in Southern Leyte – considered one of the most disaster-prone provinces in the entire country. Due to its location and topography, it faces the risk of not only earthquakes and typhoons, but also volcanic, flash floods, landslides and in the case of some towns, over-ground flooding and liquefaction.

In partnership with Smart and through a grant from the World Bank, this project uses a seemingly simple tool – text messaging – to help local disaster management units, barangay officials, volunteers and citizens communicate.

Using Smart's Whishard – a web and SMS-based information dissemination and feedback-gathering system – they can instantly send and receive localized weather bulletin, up-to-the-minute situation reports and calls for assistance. Through their mobile phones, Southern Leyte towns united in facing disasters, both in times when they were separated by landslide-prone mountains and rough stormy seas.

Reliability, resilience and reach – these have long been the strengths of Smart's network, keeping continuous lines connected, even in the face of natural calamities. But more than being able to respond quickly during disasters, Smart is empowering communities to be better prepared for calamities through reliable and effective communications.

It shows when you need it most – Smart, maaasahan.

CSC shelves more comprehensive SALN form

By Leslie M. Calamandrei

WASH a law and cry from lawmakers, the Defense Commission (DSC) has deferred the use of assets transfer the filing of statements of assets, salaries and net worth (SALIS) that would require public officials to disclose all their sources of income and detailed expenses of households.

It also will public-offend any use of the old form as filing their GANs by 2011, the dead line for which is on April 30.

Said he using the new form may not be a new one, and we decided to have exempted with the requirement to disclose their assets and liabilities, the CBO said.

In its resolution, the commission said the new IAN forms were created in compliance with the laws requiring the filing of such documents. But it declined to pass up its one because of the accommodations in various sections.

The commission maintains that the revised SALM form is needed to enhance how the regulator monitors the submission of a SALM. However, keeping an open mind, the commission agreed to undertake a more thorough and complete review of the issues raised as it will greatly affect the proper filing out of the revised SALM form," it said.

Crises against SALN

The suits against the NCRD were filed mainly from the House of Representatives, the Senate and various organizations of government employees, namely, the Philippine Government Employees' Association, Local Government Mechanical Engineers Association of the

International Financial Institutions, and National Governance of Government Employees
Working Council.

The Texas committee on civil service and professional regulation passed a resolution stating that the CSC is "entirely the property of the law firm, while a consejo asesor [advisory committee] reports to the CSC, warning that the new lists had a possible constitutional infirmity. Legality is impracticable."

The British association, as well as the national groups, also said many government workers did not have sufficient knowledge to monitor the firms properly and had no help from professional environmental engineers.

The rules for medical/MAN form require that members to declare the estimated amounts of their personal and family expenses. These could include grocery costs and electricity bills, as well as expenses for mobile phone.

They would also have to disclose the interest and sources of their gross income, aside from their salaries, if any. They must reveal as well the sources of income that they paid.

Gazmin: PMA graduates joining cleaner, reformed armed forces

PHIL DEL PEAR, Singapore City—The graduation Philippine Military Academy "Regiment" Class of 2012 will be joining a "classroom" Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) subunit to endogenous worms and modernization, Defense Secretary Wilfredo Linares Calano said here on Tuesday.

The young officers are the fresh well-spring of new knowledge and high principles in public service. "New entry comes at an ideal time, as just we are now entering the professional armed forces. Gone are the discarded misgivings of the past that had not dented the professionalism of our armed forces," Garmen told the 357 members of the Society.

"This area is the true essence of the genuine ideals of public service, good government, transparency and accountability," he said.

Later he told reporters: "I am saying that with full confidence because we have translated several rebukes, and the rebukes have been appreciated by all sectors, to include the unions, and we make sure that the anti-practices that have been committed before will not be committed again."

Instead, he said, the Agency administers what has evolved into a military hospital experts to improve the skills, capacity and knowledge of the workforce.

In his speech before the voters, Garmus said: "Today we have a commitment to elect who really cares for the needs of our citizens, so that they can undertake the challenges of their own lives here."

"Building the needs of our soldiers into a high state of morale, we have implemented an amount of $1,000 per month as a reward to soldiers for any soldiers who are engaged in combat states. This is in addition to the $1,000 per month that they have been receiving as combat pay."

Plans that 10,000 homes for the homeless will be built in Central and southern Europe. Similar housing facilities will be made available to the Malays and Moslems, he said.

The implementation of our modernization program is currently in full swing. Sustained study the acquisition of military platforms and equipment, our defense department and the Armed Forces of the Philippines are working on the approval of contracts for the 10 most important projects that will be implemented in the next five years," he said. Josefin Collins and Leticia Williams, Singapore, New Straits Times

THE GOVERNMENT is considering reducing the toll on the country's toll roads and even allowing their use for low-costing off-peak buses. President Aquino said in a forum with business leaders on Friday night.

The possible reduction in tolls was one of the measures the President said when he was asked what the government intended to do to combat the impact of rising oil prices on the transport sector.

"There are various members of the private sector who are proposing that, for instance, should roads really be a revenue source in terms of the tolls charged," Mr. Aquino said in the forum during the 2011-2012 anniversary of the anti-fuel subsidy law.

He said such relief would save the burden of the transport sector and "benefits" the economy, not the government, which is being transported through these toll roads.

"It is important to say that there is a possibility that for certain off-peak hours, it might be totally free but with a discount would be better," he said.

"We have been initiating a dialogue with the transport sector among others," he added.

The other measures the government has implemented to help the transport sector include the toll reduction program and low fuel prices for transport companies.

Partnership Program

"Among the things that we have been doing is the Partnership Program, which provides a subsidy," Mr. Aquino said.

"There is a facility of the Department of Transportation where they can get some cooperation. It can lead up to P10 million in one year, some more, some less. Therefore, the profile of the government will be seen in the transport sector," he said.

The President said Financial Economics and Development Secretary Antonio Gueo, and Economic Planning Secretary Gerardo Alonzo, had been in a meeting last week to discuss the program. They said the program will be a "win-win" for the government and the transport sector.

Mr. Aquino made the remarks during a forum with business leaders on Friday night. The forum was held by the 2011-2012 anniversary of the anti-fuel subsidy law.

under Spain's Ministry of Foreign Affairs and is based on the historic Spanish city of Cádiz, its nearest neighbor predicated in King Juan Carlos I.

"This is a great honor not only for myself but also for our country and I thank the Royal Academy for the opportunity to be a member of this academic community," Angara said.

By becoming the Royal Academy's new vice president, Angara will lead the institution on the human side, including with the business side of promoting Filipino with Spanish relations in America.

According to Angara, the academy was now reaching out to Asia, primarily through the Philippines.

"We expect a constant dialogue and a common goal...

once again become partners in economic, social and academic development," he said.

Enlightening Spanish ties

Angara was nominated and appointed for his contributions in establishing and strengthening the Philippine relationship with Spain, Mexico and other Latin American nations with which it shares common history and heritage of being a part-time colony in the world as in the Pacific, particularly Spain.

The academy's officers include the Philippines' historic ties with Spain and Mexico led to the institutionalization of the Philippine-Spanish Friendship Day Act and the 20th Anniversary Day of the Philippine Independence.

Philippine-Spanish Friendship Day is celebrated every June 30. The first International Day of the University was established in September and October 2010, commemorating the importance of the global education which flourished between 1565 and 1615 between Manila and Academics in Mexico. The Philippines played a key role in the trade route using galleons which linked Asia to Europe in the 16th century.

Outstanding academic Angara was awarded Spanish Foreign Honor Award in 2010, the first Southeast Asian to win the foreign policy award. He is also the Philippines' official representative to the United Nations.

Angara will be delivering his inaugural address as Corresponding Academic Member to the Royal Spanish Academy in April 2012.

His responsibilities, including as a member of the academy, are to promote the publication of the Royal Academy's books and other publications.

an outstanding academic and intellectual, having served as president of the University of the Philippines, and his leadership in the development of education, culture and the arts.

Angara's academic journey began with studies at the University of the Philippines, and he later served as a member of the Royal Academy of Sciences and the Royal Academy of Letters.

TALK of the TOWN

IN THE THROES OF GOLD FEVER

Will mining kill children of Lombok?

By Angelique Dorado

I WAS a presenter last month at an international conference and workshop on the socio-economic, environmental and health impacts of artisanal and small-scale mining in Indonesia.

The first of its kind in Indonesia, the conference was held at Sampoerna University in Malang, Central Java. It gathered Indonesian academics and international professors from the United States, the Philippines, Malaysia, New Zealand and China as well as representatives of the central and local governments, mining sector and international non-governmental organizations.

The 26 papers presented were an indicator of the current research and extension efforts in Indonesia, and in several South-east Asian nations in order to provide science-based options and solutions to problems arising from unregulated small-scale mining.

After the academic part of the conference was concluded, we traveled to the island of Lombok—one of the island's gold-rich regions of Indonesia.

News on Bali

It is the island next to Bali and is becoming popular among local and foreign tourists. It is located in the west region, "paradise" destination in Indonesia.

We flew into the recently opened Lombok International Airport. Lombok was well-served with a light drizzle and a breeze.

The image of the lush setting seems to contradict... At the end of the conference we will find a part of gold. Little do visitors know that the island is not the throno of a gold forest. We had come to Lombok to see, witness to a workshop on sustainable practices in artisanal and small-scale gold mining.

The activities were organized so that this was an outreach program to small-scale miners.

When they found out that two of us were from the Philippines they warmly exclaimed that they learned their trade from Filipino small-scale miners.

In order to provide alternatives and options to some very toxic practices, which small-scale miners employ.

Essentially there are three types of mining: large-scale, small-scale and very small-scale.

Mineral exploration activities from 1966 to 2000 identified significant mineral deposits in many locations of Lombok. Small-scale mining started in 2000 in two villages and then rapidly spread to 18 locations, according to district authorities.

Within a year it was estimated that there were 3,000 miners of whom only 275 were local residents. A majority were from grains from Indonesia, Thailand and Kalimantan provinces. They came to try their luck in this new gold-rich area. They were offering an average 3,000 baht per month.

Basic protocols

As the end of 2000 the local government of the West Lombok regency (equivalent of a county) officially banned and strictly illegal small-scale mining activities. The ban was part of the policy to develop the Selatung region into a tourism area. This led to large-scale protests with roadblocks and burning tires.

Despite the ban, artisanal mining is rampant. The district revenue collection from the West Lombok mining and Mineral Resources office suggest that there are now 4,000 diggers and spread across 12,000 ha of protected forests and private land, acquired by local and non-local developers.

Patchwork of turquoise

One visit to several small-scale mining locations, the mineral scenery was amazing. The small-scale miners were a patchwork of blue and orange, representing, which were the diggers of small-scale miners.

On one of our stops at a small-scale village, the miners were drinking to us. We showed several miners returning very narrow hand-dug tunnels and vertical shafts. Looking through these people were shafts with holes connected to the ground, which pumped out water.

We saw their packing out baskets filled with rocks which were then poured into baskets and to be sorted under the health of someone in the village area. A hand-dug rock structure was nearby showing our preliminary assessment, which were again broken and shattered to the health of 18 diggers and rock mines.

Mercury

Small-scale is located with a sack full of ore and approximately a cup of mercury and topped up with water. The mining process takes from five hours to 20 hours, and the ore is then poured into a sack and sorted the gold.

The whole process—from digging the ore, milling and amalgamating, and pouring the ore into small-scale place with

Islands

We were told by some miners that accidents due to land and rock slides, and small-scale mining were a significant problem, particularly during the rainy season. We could not tell workers wearing and carrying mercury and water in small-scale mining and preparing the ore to be sold to the nearby local market.

Moreover, the village was confined to areas in which children, adults and goats were bringing. Conditions include, go to large-scale mining and water large-scale mining being used to extract gold, especially when mercury was in short supply. Arguably, it is a safer way of extracting gold without creating a major legacy of environmental pollution.

Dead reefs

We were, however, quite shocked by the use of cyanide as a further process the mercury-based mining. This further could pose the toxicity of mercury as it makes it extremely deadly. We saw dead sharks floating in the shallow channels alongside shallow storage areas of the cyanide-based mining.

The local health of local mining change areas were carrying lots surrounding irrigation channels, which were carrying water in the public, long-term and then, all this seemed to be a public health time based on the impact.

In the village, there was a local atmosphere and we were surrounded very warmly. They asked us how we were and what we did. We explained that we were a team of scientists looking at ways to reduce the health risks of the ore and small-scale mining.

Filipino miners

When they found out that one of us were from the Philippines they warmly exclaimed that they learned their trade from Filipino small-scale miners and that the best chance for expansion extension came from the Philippines.

One of the young miners came up and showed us his 3-month-old baby who had a silver-colored head. He said that if this was a symptom of mercury poisoning. His initial observation suggested that the child was born with hereditary symptoms of mercury poisoning. The slightly unusual appearance pointed to mercury.

Curbing mercury use

MERCURY, making mercury illegal in many areas where they operate and miners return to places where they are gold resources are found. There is very little communication between the sector, society and government authorities. Authorities can pre-empt in place to reduce the impact of mercury on artisanal and small-scale mining by:

- Reducing mercury supply
- Reducing mercury use in small-scale mining
- Reducing quantities of goods that result in mercury emissions
- Creating mercury-reduction zones
- Using mercury and small-scale mining
- Creating and enforcing and monitoring on the site and disposal of mercury
- Improving communication on fish consumption, occupational risks and product labeling.

However, the most sustainable solution is to educate miners on mercury in fisheries and regulate their activities. This is the first step required to transform the role of privileged miners into citizens, creating a structure to focus on better organized small-scale industries. In fact, this can be a long-term solution to the migration of people from rural areas to urban centers.

They then passed a question: "Would we be able to help them do their mining in a way, which would not poison their children and their future?"

One could argue in the way that they would not really give up their mineral wealth, but they would not really give up their mineral wealth, but they would not really give up their mineral wealth.

Amid power woes, business flickers

By Inquirer Mindanao

WIDOW Siti Anita Herra tells capsules, for candles and children "tocio" to support her six children. "I need to eat my savings while it is in the house, and then and other cooking needs. I have my children as helpers in my business," she says.

But the latest power outage leaves her in a dark room. "Business is not good," she says.

Now, Herra is having a hard time delivering 1,000 ice cream sticks, 500 capsules and 200 packs of children's toilet to U.S. schools in Zamboanga City.

"We always have electricity and I don't want my children to be in the dark at night to help me," she says.

William Lee, the president of Mega Fishing Corp., has the same lament. He says Mega Fishing Corp. is a small company and he is not a big fisherman. "I don't want my children to be in the dark at night to help me," he says.

power is multiplied. And electric companies are being blamed for the problem.

But Juan Carlos, the owner of the Zamboanga City Electric Cooperative (Zamco), says the company only has one of the outages from power shortage.

Zamco's operations with an 800-watt power supply, but the company says it is not a big fisherman. "I don't want my children to be in the dark at night to help me," he says.

The NCCP is a private company that operates and maintains the country's transmission network and is responsible for delivering electricity to distribution utilities and electric consumers.

Growing consumption
 Carlos said the NCCP had to reduce the power load because "our main source, the hydro plants in Luzon, could not provide enough power to address the growing consumption." The hydro plants produce a steady supply of 750 MW for the island, but demand has risen to 1,200 MW.

The only alternative, Carlos said, was to tap independent power sources, such as thermal plants in Luzon, to get at least 450 MW.

CANDLES are one of the most common sources of light in many households in Zamboanga City at night because of power outages. Consumers are urged to conserve electricity to avoid power outages.

She said both the Super 2 and Palangko had no more power, which has a combined 10 MW or more, have stopped capacity that could sustain the power demand. After the outages, the capacity of 100 MW but only 90 MW are being transmitted to the Mindanao grid. On the other hand, Palangko has an installed capacity of 250 MW but only 100 MW are being dispatched.

QC homeowners lose TRO bid vs added tax

By Julia M. Aurelio

A QUEZON City court has denied the appeal of a group of homeowners for a temporary restraining order (TRO) against additional dues for real-estate properties under a new tax ordinance on so-called housing.

Judge Claudio Gonsales said the Alliance of Quezon City Homeowners Association failed to show proof that they owned properties worth more than P500,000, the value covered by the 0.5 percent additional tax.

In an earlier case, March 14, the judge also dismissed a "quarry operator" who

"This quarry operator is a professional taxpayer and the imposition of the additional tax will lead to an unfair tax burden. At any rate, the court has a duty to see that the additional tax is not applied to the quarry operator," the judge said.

The court also noted that the petitioners did not submit any declaration to prove ownership and the value of their properties.

"They also did not even offer evidence, such as tax bills, to prove that they have been assessed for the said tax," he added.

The homeowners' motion asked the court to stop the city government from imposing the additional 0.5 percent real estate tax, saying it was unconstitutional.

The additional tax was reflected in January under a newly passed Localized Housing Tax Ordinance, which aims to set aside a fund for housing projects for informal settlers.

Under the ordinance, the tax will be collected for five years from homeowners whose properties are worth more than P500,000. The additional tax paid will be returned to them after a five-year period through a loan. In the civil case filed against the treasurer, named as respondents, were Mayor Richard Iñiguez, Vice Mayor Jay Alvarado, members of the city council and city treasurer Rigel Misanes.

In rejecting the petition for a TRO, the court also noted that the injury that the homeowners said they would suffer because of the additional tax may be avoided, and is not irreparable.

"The damage to be sustained by the petitioners can be satisfactorily compensated or reasonably measured, the same being based on the amount of additional tax per taxpayer will pay by reason of the implementation of the questioned tax ordinance," the order said.

A samurai lives on in Paco

By Depina Y. Garcia

THE SILENCE of a cultural leader standing proud at Taft Station in Pasig, Manila, may seem out of place to today's visitors.

History would show, however, that it carries a place and social status.

The stern-looking image of a man in robes, his hair tied back in a queue, may, despite the 19th-century Japanese warrior and feudal lord Tokugawa Ieyasu, also known as Tokugawa Shogun.

Instead of working the legendary Japanese "samurai" Ieyasu, Tokugawa Ieyasu holds up a "Shinto-style" sword point to the ground, with springs depicting the sword's Chikara.

Tokugawa sought refuge inside the passing Catholic city of Manila in 1614 after being expelled from his holdings in Tokugawa, Osaka, for being a Christian. He was welcomed by the Jesuits in the Philippines as the absentee lord of around 600,000 Japanese Christians who had refused to renounce their faith despite the persecution they faced during Japan's Shogunate era.

Due to an illness he contracted during the sea voyage that took more than a month, Tokugawa died just 40 days after reaching Paco Station last April, his burial was enough to establish the first Japanese settlement in Manila, particularly in Paco, where the Shogun's later resting place is now known as Plaza Dila (Yokohama).

The serene welcome and honor Manila bestowed on Tokugawa last year honored his legacy as the Philippine capital and its home city of Yokohama.

The two were declared sister cities in 1979, and the bond was renewed in a new bid at the plaza last month.

"Manila is an important city for Japan because it was the first Japanese settlement here and the first Japanese to be welcomed here and to live here," remembers "Isamu" Ito, an "Isamu" Ito and during the visit to Manila.

Ito was one of 13 Japanese citizens who made a courtesy call on Manila Mayor Alfredo Lina. They brought the Japanese International Association (JIA) which held its 10th anniversary celebration in the Philippines last month.

And Ito had more to say. The two groups provided some a wealth of history, continuity as the nation, with the peaceful looking Japanese official smiling at the image, looking up and smiling at the Tokugawa statue, his face almost three minutes as a sign of respect.

Added that Tokugawa's life could mean to today's Filipinos who have known the man who came from a different time and culture, the Tokugawa story looks like a model. From him, we could learn about many things.

"We have had contact, he never changed. The kind of aid that should be held on by Filipinos but also by the Japanese and people around the world," Ito said.

Cops nab suspect in Tribune man's ambush in Pasig

THE PASIG City Police on Saturday announced the arrest of one of the suspects in the March 11 shooting of The Daily Tribune reporter Benjie Garcia.

In a police statement, the city's police chief, Senior Supt. Jose Cardona, said his team had arrested one of

"him" in the shooting area on the boundary between Pasig and Calabarzon City on Saturday 5 p.m.

He said a picture of the suspect had been shown in Pasig and that the victim confirmed that he was one of the three men who ambushed him in Barangay Pabon on Tuesday night.

Angela, who remained seven gunshot wounds, earlier managed to whisper the name of his brother, Benjie, before losing consciousness at the hospital later that night, according to police reports.

The Pasig police commissioner at the time said his brother in the Pasig

Police Division drew him there to receive medical aid. Benjie was drawing medical attention in a pending arrest against Garcia before he was shot.

They should be focusing on the hunt for his brothers, Benjie, Benjie, and Benjie.

STAFF Sgt. Robert Baltes (left) is interviewed in the National Training Center at Fort Benning, Ga., on Feb. 10, 2011.

US identifies sergeant in Afghanistan massacre

THE MILITARY on Friday identified the soldier accused of killing 15 Afghan villagers in a 2011 attack in Helmand province as Staff Sgt. Robert Baltes, a 39-year-old father of two who had been injured twice in combat over the course of four deployments and had, his lawyer said, no memory of what he did.

The release of Baltes' name, his identity as Staff Sgt., and his status as an unauthorized soldier without public information about him from the Pentagon, which said it had withheld his identity to long because of concerns about his and his family's security.

An official said on Friday that Baltes had been transferred from Benning to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he had a wife and three children. Baltes, who was in Afghanistan in 2011, was accused of killing 15 Afghan villagers in a 2011 attack in Helmand province.

Military officials say Baltes, who has yet to be formally charged, had no recall of what happened in the Helmand province in the morning last October, which was his second deployment to Afghanistan.

Little more than the outline of Baltes' life is publicly known. His family lives in Lake Tahoe, a community about 20 km northwest of San Francisco. Baltes' first wife, who died in 2007, was a nurse. Baltes' second wife, who died in 2007, was a nurse. Baltes' third wife, who died in 2007, was a nurse.

Baltes was assigned to Fort Benning in 2007, and then spent the next eight years at the office of the 11th Air Force, and then spent most of his last career at Fort Benning. Baltes was part of the 3rd Stryker Brigade in the 1st Air Cavalry Division, which was in Afghanistan in 2011.

The killing was a deadly massacre, according to the Pentagon, which said it had withheld his identity to long because of concerns about his and his family's security.

Bin Laden plotted to kill Obama, seized files say

WASHINGTON—A terrorist whom Osama bin Laden wanted to assassinate, President Barack Obama was himself killed in a drone strike last year, shortly after evidence of the plot showed up in documents seized by the SEAL team that killed bin Laden in Pakistan.

The documents include one in which bin Laden asked that bin Laden be killed. Bin Laden, who was part of the 3rd Stryker Brigade in the 1st Air Cavalry Division, which was in Afghanistan in 2011, was accused of killing 15 Afghan villagers in a 2011 attack in Helmand province.

"BILIB KAMI SA 'YO"—NEW SSS TAGLINE RECOGNIZES WORKERS

The Social Security System (SSS) recently launched its new advertising tagline—"Bilib Kami Sa 'Yo," which recognizes the hardworking Filipino workers who have to sacrifice a lot so they could provide a better and more secure life for their families.

SSS Vice President for Public Affairs and Special Events Division Maribel G. Baguio said that the new tagline is SSS' way of expressing its appreciation for Filipino workers who realize the value of social security protection and of saving for their future by registering with the SSS and regularly paying their contributions that in turn, enable them to avail of benefits and loans.

"Our members and their beneficiaries are our reason for being."

BILIB KAMI SA 'YO.

Our reason for being and since they are the most important person in our institution, it is to bring that the time we pay tribute to them," UP Baguio explained. "Bilib ang SSS sa mga magulangin."

The SSS supports the Filipino workers in getting a secure future for their families. It shall continue to provide services that would protect its members and their families, making benefits more meaningful and responsive to their needs whenever they ask.

The new tagline is incorporated into the various SSS advertisements and colorful materials currently being disseminated to print and broadcast media.

Howard powers Magic

WASHINGTON Wizards big man Steve Howard (right) blocks shot by Atlanta Hawks' Zach Randolph during the first half of their NBA game.

ORLANDO—Back home for at least one more season, Dwight Howard easily slipped into a familiar role, leading what seemed Magic attack in an 86-78 victory over the then Jersey Nets Friday in front of an adoring and grateful crowd at the Amway Center.

Howard had 18 points in lead as Magic players in their eighth and dominant a New Jersey team he was especially happy to join before ending his talk by congratulating Orlando through the season.

"You guys (Orlando) are like I am in another team and I love it," Howard said. "I agree. It was great. I think all the fans that work with me all the time, I think we did this."

Howard extended their advantage by as much as 20 points in the third quarter, winning it. He says the Magic's dominance, Howard says, "I am really not sure if we are improving."

"The only thing I was unhappy with because I was the 20 minutes and again I was not," Howard said. "We just don't value the ball very much, we just don't want it and don't really think it's important and that's going to be a huge problem."

New Jersey played without top scorer Bruce Bowen for the fourth consecutive game with a suspended center while Gerald Wallace, injured in a trade deadline deal, is expected to join the season on Sunday.

"These guys didn't go down for us," Howard said. "They have the floor to win and to guard everybody and they control the floor."

In Los Angeles, Kobe Bryant scored 20 points and Pau Gasol had seven points and five assists in his latest effort — a 97-92 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

In New York, Steve Chandler scored 16 points and Jeremy Lin had 13 as the Knicks beat the Indiana Pacers, 115-103. For their second straight dominant victory under coach coach Mike Woodson.

In San Antonio, Tony Parker scored 20 points and Jeremy Lin had 13 as the Knicks beat the Indiana Pacers, 115-103. For their second straight dominant victory under coach coach Mike Woodson.

In Philadelphia, Lebron James scored 20 points and Dwyane Wade had 12 points and 11 rebounds as the Miami Heat beat the Boston Celtics, 84-75.

Soft-spoken PDIC prex to get tough on shenanigans

By Michelle B. Ramos

INGENIERA A. Armenta, appointed president of the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. (PDIC) in June last year, could have simply continued enjoying a more leisurely retirement and low-stress life in the private sector as a banker.

However, when the opportunity to work in government under the current administration beckoned him, he had no second thoughts about obliging.

"I had no hesitation. I knew I wanted to serve the public under the P-Noy administration," Armenta tells candidly. He says the great government platform of President Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III was something inspiring enough, that he put his ego to leave his comfort zone and take on all the challenges related to public service.

Unlike many public figures, the self-appraised banker is isolated from the press. He works most months on the job, but has yet to call his first press conference (Quinsigale was just granted this interview after constant prodding of PDIC public relations staff).

Members of the media who are content to see the banker in the news may have different interpretations of his shying away from media. They say this was just because he believes in meeting an organization in a disinterested manner.

And as about any news involving PDIC, he says it's his low-volatility zone, the insurance covers responsible for the specific issues on the hot topics.

His commanding aura, however, does not affect the very high spirits he has for PDIC.

Armenta, who once served as president of Real Commercial Banking Corp. and chief operating officer of Philippine National Bank, says that one of the key objectives of PDIC is to build confidence in the depositors in the banking sector.

He says the main involving the Legacy Group, the biggest as far in the history of banking in the Philippines, is scattering the public and the government should not see it as a daily problem.

The PDIC chief says people should not be surprised of news in the banking sector pay for their wrongdoing as that means individuals are discouraged from placing money in financial institutions.

The rural banks under the Legacy Group were ordered closed about three years ago by regulators, who said those entities were using the banking system to avoid depositors' money.

PDIC, being the one in charge of ensuring money of depositors once a bank is shut down, had to pay a hefty P11.5 billion in deposit insurance.

"PDIC spent P11.5 billion to pay the depositors, but when it was generated on the basis of the liquidation of the assets of the closed rural banks it is just half a billion," Armenta says. "We should not let things," he adds.

Banking cases have been filed against people behind the Legacy Group, owned by Carlos delos Angeles, and Armenta says he wants to see the government win these cases.

PDIC is currently beefing up its legal department, Armenta says, meaning it has the resources it needs to pursue the cases. He adds that PDIC is considering joining the services of a private law firm to assist its legal staff, if such a move would be given blessing by the Commission on Anti-Graft.

"We are strongly pursuing cases against corrupt stockholders, directors, managers, and owners of closed banks. It's our job to deter shenanigans and to continuously pursue criminals," Armenta says.

After the closure of the legacy-owned banks, there have been more rural banks ordered closed by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

Armenta says PDIC is studying the circumstances behind the bank closures to determine any wrongdoing and to prevent such if any possible criminal offenses are determined.

"I WANTED to serve the public under the P-Noy administration."

In the meantime, while PDIC works on the cases involving banking issues, it is also focusing on the equally important task of educating the public about how to avoid being victimized by financial criminals.

Armenta says PDIC has been conducting road shows to various parts of the archipelago, teaching people how to become intelligent depositors. PDIC has also put up materials on financial education in its website to help the public guard against scams.

In addition, average deposit interest rate is posted in the website and is constantly updated for relevance of the public. He says that with this information, people should be wise enough to question the integrity of banks offering deposit interest rates that are abnormally high.

Many banks, including those owned by the Legacy Group, that were ordered closed for unsafe and unsound banking practices were offering interest rates that were way

Get it all back!

When would last time you had a long leisurely conversation with a friend on a park bench, sipping a good cup of coffee under the shade of a tree? Remember the days when you see child her playing the same street games that you did enjoyed when you were young? When was the last time you enjoyed your precious "free time"? Remember when you could still find a quiet patch of green, open a book, and relax a nice, quiet afternoon?

Everyday, we are faced with countless choices on what to eat or drink, where to travel, and what to wear. But eventually, all these amenities fade into monotony when the weekday is over or when the weekend comes, where do we go to find respite?

Circle Verde, a 12-hectare residential enclave in Calle Industria, Baguio-bayan, Quezon City, offers to give you back what was lost in city living. This residential project is set in an elevated podium, creating a tranquil central community park that is exclusive for residents. This means you have more intimate conversations with friends a place to get to know your neighbors, and more quiet time for yourself. With over 70% of the total area of Circle Verde dedicated to open space, this is the perfect place for outdoor activities. And since Circle Verde is planned meticulously, the park's perimeter is guaranteed pedestrian-friendly.

The master plan allows for structures that work with and around nature to make the ideal living space convenient and relaxing. In this symphony of grass, trees, wind and water, stories of childhood games, afternoon picnics, and neighborhood camaraderie will continue to flourish. This is the green living space where the charm of country living meets the convenience of life in a vibrant city.

Circle Verde is a project of Ortigas & Company, a long-standing developer of quality residential communities such as Valle Verde and Green Meadows, as well as shopping destinations like The Galleria and Greenbelt Shopping Center.

SERANG, GRATES—The sign at the front door says it all. Cecil's Café wishes to offer a warm, friendly place where families and friends can come together to savor the home-cooked meals of Cecil Indaco—Jardines.

Five time visitors are often impressed with the dining place's picture-perfect interior, thanks to the café's tasteful design background.

Her interest in food started in her youth as she grew up in a family that loved to entertain at home. She carries the same mindset in her current endeavor as she describes the way she treats her guests at the café, "Treating a party in my house."

Cecil simply started in the early 90s by selling storage spaces and then later on Christmas time. Eventually she partnered with a coffee shop located along Aguirre Street in Makati where she did the cooking and baking. She eventually moved to her home, the area around a full-service catering business around 2006.

In October 2011, she finally decided to open her very own café in an obscure location right before the Adrenaline Rushery along the hill. Now highly rated going to Tagaytay, Cecil wishes that she would receive business advice that "location, location, location" are very important factors. She admits that there are not-of-way uncertainties that have managed to gain a clientele simply through word of mouth.

Cecil's family also has a hardware in Makati that she often to friends and visitors who are looking for a place to extend. This new business house that can accommodate as much capacity as 60 persons.

She wishes that one has to be passionate about what one does. "You do 20 percent work and the rest you have to enjoy," she says, integrating capital plus passion, ensuring the staff are also motivated.

Cecil who also does the cooking at her café emphasizes the importance of being hands-on in her small business. "I know how to cook and I know how to clean," she mentions.

Another memorable anecdote at her guest café is the Chinese lamps also known as "Hong" (Gongxi), which lamps that was popularized at Green Palace Restaurant, her mother's former dining place in Cavendish.

Cecil relates that during its peak, the restaurant used to sell about 500 pieces a day. The only difference now is that Cecil uses large napkins instead of the typical cloth napkins from the grocery.

Cecil's Café is open from Tuesday to Sunday 11 am to 6 pm. For directions and reservations, call 0920-815-7327.

WE DEVELOP THE MOST EXPERTS

PLDT NOW HAS THE LARGEST NUMBER OF MEF-CERTIFIED ENGINEERS IN THE WORLD.

Expertise is with the most critical asset for any operation. Apart from ensuring an infrastructure and resources, PLDT also focuses on the overall competence and skill set of its team. There is a significant investment in technological and human capital for its customers, after a certain conclusion in choosing ICT partners or vendors.

With the enterprise market clamoring for high-speed and connectivity more than ever, PLDT builds on these strong alliances for wider, more reliable coverage and more of all in building professional expertise.

For the past several years, PLDT's NGA/2012 (Next Generation Network) has undergone significant improvements, one of which was its merger with my network, Philippine services—Telecoms, Indian Telecoms, Inc., formerly SMTS and Digital. This alliance ensures more robust, reliable, and coordinated PLDT products and services. To match this infrastructure fortification, PLDT has developed the largest number of engineers certified via the Master Internet Protocol v4—Carrier Ethernet Certified Professional (MIEP-CECP) examinations.

The MIEP is a global industry alliance acting as the worldwide defining body for Carrier Ethernet. It sets guidelines for ensuring professionals capable of handling and operating different solutions with best-in-class quality practices and expertise.

Extensive networking enables a technological leap in carrier networking due to its scalability, scope, and cost efficiency. It allows customers to easily scale their bandwidth to the right capacity as they work with the growth of their business through every stage of change—no physical or pre-planning required. The significantly shorter lead-time for provisioning and lower the cost of expansion, in fact, due to its unmatched scalability, worldwide Telecom services are expected to grow at an annual rate of 2% to 3% in 2012 by 2014, according to an insight Research study.

In October 2011 PLDT was the first Philippine telecommunications provider to be awarded with both MIEP v4 and v4 certification for its Carrier Ethernet services. Just recently, this achievement was recognized by the American MEF Association at the MEF Congress, the event in the world.

Add to this one of the largest talent pools of Cisco-Certified IFA, CCNP's, CCNA, CCWA, and CCIT's among others, you can be assured of global class service delivery and solutions. PLDT NGA/2012's professional leadership is proven with its preeminent expertise, on-edge expansion, and infrastructure upgrade. Philippine enterprise can be assured that they're with the right ICT partner promising both the network strength and human capital for leadership innovation.

Known for 'pancit' Malabon and 'pichi-pichi,' Amber started as a garage eatery

By Sherie Robles-Mendoza

FROM its first day, Erika M. Rosales could not believe that what started out as a humble eatery in the garage of their house in Malabon would eventually become what is now the Amber Golden Circle of businesses.

Business increasingly started coming her way, she claims, according to friends. But everything changed when her uncle Manuel L. Rosales, or "Lolo-Clado" as he is fondly called, advised her to get up a business plan paper by himself.

Rosales recalls that her uncle gave her

In our view, it was the perfect time to give us our proof of concept," says Reyes. Reyes moved the company's focus to business, MTO, into the industry's vision of the future.

At first, Reyes, Reyes had no idea of the new developers that offer a choice of old and new residential towers with the new residential pool and a patch of green or some-what that have become the rage among middle-class Filipinos.

New AHEM officers

Two members of The Grange Group, Arlene S. Jansz and Anne S. Wilcox, were recently elected officers of the American Association of Professional Geographers (AAPG). It is a group of 40 societies (archaeology, anthropology, cartography, geology, geography, history, linguistics, meteorology, oceanography, paleontology, and other human-related disciplines) in the Philippines. Inge S. The Grange Group will elect its annual executive officer for 2013-2014. Arlene Jansz (University of the Philippines) and Anne Wilcox (University of the Philippines) are the two candidates for the position. Introducing the first Graphical System Design (GSD) Lab in the country to offer "experiential engineering" to students!

Recognized as Center of Development in Computer Engineering, APC's School of Engineering in cooperation with National Instruments (NI) introduces the NI-APC Graphical System Design (GSD) Lab to upgrade engineering education in the Philippines.

With the GSD Lab, engineering students can now move from theory to actually designing and prototyping systems with the use of graphical tools like LabVIEW, which helps outcome better student, test and control of hardware. As the only one of its kind, APC's School of Engineering promises to change the landscape of engineering in the Philippines.

National Instruments and Asia Pacific College
open Electrical System Design Laboratory

Asia Pacific College (APC) and National Instruments (NI) recently announced their partnership in the 3rd Global System Design (GSD) Laboratory in the Philippines. Located at the APC School of Engineering, the GSD lab aims to help engineering students evolve their minds to designing and analyzing systems using graphical tools like LabVIEW or multi-threaded and programming environment that helps automate measurement, test and control of hardware.

"Our collaboration with Asia Pacific College is a testament to our commitment to the classroom. Through the Graphical System Design Lab and by using AutoCAD LT software to enhance learning, we demonstrate what industrial engineering is all about, and enable students to take their ideas to the next level and see them come to life," says Chandan Reddy, Managing Director for National Instruments Southeast Asia.

Graphical system design is a faster way for engineers to design systems that work in the real world. Unlike model-based design, which relies on mathematical modeling, graphical system design helps engineers focus on solving the application rather than working on computations.

"The CED Lab combines with our motto of 'Real Projects, Real Learning' and provides our vision of the School of Engineering to lead in application-based learning. We are designed to have National Institutes of Standards and Technology (NIST) as a partner in world class training," says Dr. Paulino Tor, President, Asia Pacific College.

Complementing the QSD Lab hardware and software environment is the M-Access to Courseware Integration with APC's Computer and Communications Engineering Curriculum and a range of research and design projects, according to Frank Starnes, Director of the QSD Lab. "The M-Access to Courseware Integration is a QSD Lab initiative with the acquisition of M-Access Research College, with the acquisition of industry-research equipment and the use of the LabWare, we can better train our students with skills needed for the modern electronics industry. We are also looking to expand the QSD Lab for our students and faculty members' research capabilities, including specific fields such as Digital Signal Processing, Control Systems, Power Electronics and Basic Communications Design." www.qsd.org.

APC helps guide its focus on significant and impactful learning coupled with application-based projects.

Zsa Zsa not a has-been

ONE of the heavy things we like about Zsa Zsa Padilla is her being so unapologetically to the point of show business, she looks...and really...it like it is.

These past few years however, her personal challenges, more involving her son and his partner, Dimpay, who appears to be going from one medical crisis to another—have taken their toll on her emotionally sensitive nature. There are things, simply put, that are too sensitive and new to handle other people with.

VIEWFINDER

Jennifer C. Zorbe

Recently, however, many issues seem to have made it difficult for her to take her opportunity. She surprised even herself by taking out at her business meetings, who shared her in her age and "mature" looks, which they really said made her a has-been.

Picking star targets is these busbers' way of getting noticed

That, by the way is not just a cruel statement, it is also a true statement. Because Zsa Zsa is at the prime of her performing skills, not just as a singer but as an actress. People in the house have the highest regard for her, and believe that she has much more to share with viewers in terms of impressive performances. So, to not that she is a has-been in the height of show business, a cruel and vicious comment from people—most of her singing partners. Looking wise, they did get in Zsa Zsa in her vulnerable state, and her emotional state here and spilled over there that Zsa Zsa is her family's breadwinner, it was particularly piling to hear comments about her body that was doing in her performance. Zsa Zsa's recent outburst on TV put in as not just emotionally but also physically, when she cried out, "How can people be so cruel? Why is there so much hatred?"

It made us reach for an answer, and this is where we came up with, not just for Zsa Zsa but also for the many other people who are appalled how the conversation circle has reached her, particularly when it comes to bodies, politics, and representation for

celebrity-becoming

It is a complicated issue, but her writer took the kind of responsibility and accountability that do TVers so much depend on. It regularly brings out the more in people who are a particularly nice combination of intellectual and sensual.

His objective is to break celebrities, because if they come on one for a while, their names would hang around. In saying so, he is in fact in their way of getting noticed and covering the 15 minutes rule.

—JENNIFER LEE

In addition, the relationship between star and viewer is broken completely by the "celebrity" showing "single female" involved. The viewer public is supposed to admire more, but some viewers also say their time and effort, and also devotion.

If a "viewer" legitimately feels that a star deserves to be rewarded, the responsibility of the viewer on the star's work, more on his or her person. And the critic should teach them to be a star in a different way. History does not mean the viewer to be successful and leading.

It is obvious that the people who star Zsa Zsa get better media in their area, on the background she should not allow herself to get affected by the bad situation.

Finally, people who do not agree that Zsa Zsa is a has-been should not involve about her personally speak up in her defense. Since on their own, there are many ways to be a star, Zsa Zsa is not the only one who is a has-been.

Abstract—A study was conducted to determine the effect of a 10% increase in the number of employees on the number of accidents in a manufacturing plant. The number of accidents was recorded for each of the 10 years before and after the increase. The results showed that the number of accidents increased by 15% after the increase in the number of employees. The study was limited to one plant and the results may not be generalizable to other plants. The study was also limited to a 10% increase in the number of employees and the results may not be generalizable to other increases. The study was also limited to a 10-year period and the results may not be generalizable to other periods. The study was also limited to a 10% increase in the number of employees and the results may not be generalizable to other increases.

the 1980s, the industry has been hit hard by a combination of factors. The most significant of these is the decline in the number of new entrants, which has led to a concentration of power among a few large firms. This has resulted in a more homogeneous market, with less competition and a higher degree of control over prices and quality. Another major factor is the increasing cost of production, which has been driven up by rising wages and the need for more sophisticated equipment. This has led to a reduction in the number of small-scale producers, who are unable to compete with the larger firms. Finally, the industry has been affected by a general decline in demand, which has been caused by a combination of factors, including a change in consumer preferences and a decline in the overall economy. This has led to a reduction in the number of units produced and a corresponding decline in the industry's output.

THE VIEW of the hillside was what made the Laurel's decide to buy the property.

"I thought the property?"
 Cedar recalls. "The new improved to be the last house we were going to build. We said we wanted it done right away, while we were still young and our house wasn't too old."

They passed away in 2004. Architects designed Cedar's house and architect Cedar's house was laid to create the house's "hilltop" look.

Now, Cedar plans to build "a house in the middle of the garden" as a tribute to her husband.

land. "We loved plants and nature. I built over this in time. The study room [in the Laurel compound on Shaw Boulevard] in Marikina City was dismantled and brought here. I want to showcase my husband's personality, his life as vice president. And his service to the country."

There was much left to do, she adds. "We still have to transfer some artifacts here and there mount a video wall." Celis hopes to open the museum to the public in November. Day's birthmonth. She has even announced an auction from the University of the Philippines to put together and preserve Day's book collection.

Also on the drawing board is an educational park. "Nahala students can visit us here all about us," Put of the property has been reserved for an outdoor auditorium. "We don't have parties often and don't sleep around and being," Celis explains. "Soon we already sold the Shaw Boulevard property we can party on the small occupied lot here towards the museum."

Celis says her husband would always drive to the place to meditate. The area had a chapel built inside the house. "He's a whole man, a whole man. I did not come here at all, until I realized I had to preserve his memory."

Denise says she has too many fond memories of the place to choose just one. All of us look loved the living area. It is filled with his things. Celis made us remove our shoes when we played on the carpeted floor. We would play with the old family camera that our grandparents brought from different Asian countries. I remember playing "Gangster" on the piano."

Two favorite pictures of Papa Day, Denise says, was actually when he was. "He is in his study pants, jeans and comfy shoes. It is not the usual Papa Day who was very formal. In the picture, he stands near the stairs, holding his pipe. His German Shepherd is beside him."
